GUIDE AND COMPLAINT FORM

Making a Complaint about the Police

GUIDE AND COMPLAINT FORM

The Office of the Independent Police Review Director (OIPRD) is responsible for receiving, managing and overseeing all public complaints about the police in Ontario. As a civilian arm's-length agency of the Ontario Ministry of the Attorney General, our decisions are independent from the government, the police, and the public.

Our goal is to provide an independent, effective, transparent and accessible public complaints system that is fair to both the public and the police and builds confidence and trust in the public complaints process.

Our office cannot investigate, recommend or lay criminal charges.

WHO CAN MAKE A COMPLAINT?

Any member of the public can make a complaint; however, the OIPRD screens complaints to ensure that the person complaining is:

- Directly affected by the incident
- A witness to the incident
- A person in a personal relationship with the directly affected person and has suffered loss, damage, distress, danger or inconvenience
- A person who has knowledge of the conduct, or has possession or control of anything that the Director feels constitutes evidence that establishes misconduct or unsatisfactory work performance
- Acting on behalf of an individual listed above and has been given written permission to make a complaint on someone else's behalf (this person is known as an agent)

The following people are not allowed to make a complaint with the OIPRD:

- The Solicitor General (Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services)
- An employee of the OIPRD
- A member or employee of the Ontario Civilian Police Commission (OCPC)
- A member or auxiliary (civilian) member of a police service cannot complain about their own service
- An employee of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) cannot complain about the OPP
- A member or employee of a police services board cannot complain about their own service

WHO CAN I COMPLAIN ABOUT?

The OIPRD can only deal with complaints about sworn police officers in Ontario. This includes all municipal, regional and provincial (OPP) police officers. The OIPRD does not have jurisdiction over RCMP officers, TTC Special Constables, GO Transit police, First Nations police officers, court officers, corrections officers, campus police, provincial offences officers or special constables.

WHAT CAN I COMPLAIN ABOUT?

The OIPRD accepts complaints about the conduct of officers and the policies or services of a police service.

Conduct: how a police officer behaves

Policies: the rules and standards that guide an officer in delivering police services

Services: how effectively and efficiently a particular police service performs its duties

You may make your complaint in English or French:

- With the OIPRD by e-file on our website: www.oiprd.on.ca, in person, by fax, by sending the form as an email attachment to: oiprdcomplaints@ontario.ca or by mailing in the form at the back of this booklet
- At any municipal, regional or provincial police station in Ontario. The police service must forward the complaint to the OIPRD within three business days

If you need accommodation under the Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act (AODA), including alternative formats of this brochure, please email:

oiprd.accommodation@ontario.ca or call toll-free 1-877-411-4773
or 416-246-7071

You do not need a lawyer to make a complaint, but a lawyer or legal clinic may assist with your complaint.

The OIPRD needs your consent before we can look into your complaint. You must sign the complaint form indicating you consent to the complaints process, otherwise we will be unable to process your complaint. The OIPRD does not accept anonymous complaints.

SCREENING YOUR COMPLAINT

Every complaint is processed and screened by the OIPRD. Each complaint will be classified as a conduct, policy or service complaint and will then be screened to determine if it will go to investigation.

If your complaint has been classified as a conduct complaint and is screened out, meaning it will not be investigated, you will receive a letter outlining the reasons for the decision.

If your complaint is screened in and continues to investigation, the OIPRD will decide who will investigate: the OIPRD, the police service you are complaining about or another police service. Many police services in Ontario have professional standards branches, sections, bureaus or units that investigate complaints referred to them by the OIPRD. You will be notified as to who will conduct the investigation.

The OIPRD is required to forward conduct complaints (whether screened in or out) to the chief of the relevant police service, or the OPP Commissioner and their professional standards units. A complaint about a chief or deputy chief will be sent to the police services board.

Policy and service complaints are screened by the OIPRD but are not investigated by the OIPRD. If they are screened in, these complaints are sent to the appropriate police service for investigation by the chief or Commissioner. A written report will be sent to you, the police services board and the OIPRD.

When an investigation is referred to a police service, their professional standards unit or a designated officer will investigate your complaint. The investigator will collect evidence and contact relevant parties, including you, the respondent officer and any witnesses. When the investigation is complete, the chief/Commissioner will send you, the respondent officer and the OIPRD the results in an investigative report.

The OIPRD maintains oversight throughout all complaint investigations conducted by a police service and reviews all investigative reports.

When the OIPRD retains a conduct complaint, an OIPRD investigator is assigned to investigate your complaint. The investigator will collect evidence and contact relevant parties, including you, the respondent officer and any witnesses. When the investigation is complete, the OIPRD will send you, the respondent officer and the chief or OPP Commissioner the results of the investigation in an investigative report.

WAYS TO RESOLVE A COMPLAINT

There are three avenues to resolve a complaint: Customer Service Resolution, Informal Resolution or Informal Resolution via Mediation. For more information about resolution options please visit www.oiprd.on.ca.

WHAT HAPPENS ONCE YOUR COMPLAINT HAS BEEN INVESTIGATED?

When the OIPRD or police have investigated your complaint, you will be notified of the outcome. The possible outcomes are:

- Your case may be referred for Informal Resolution with your consent.
- The police may take disciplinary action against the officer(s) being complained about without a hearing if misconduct of a less serious nature is substantiated (that means there is enough evidence to believe, on reasonable grounds, that misconduct has occurred).
- The chief must hold a disciplinary hearing when misconduct of a serious nature has been substantiated.
- The complaint may be unsubstantiated if there is not enough evidence to believe, on reasonable grounds, that misconduct has occurred.
- For service and policy complaints, the chief or Commissioner may decide to improve or change the policies and/or services of their police service.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU DISAGREE WITH HOW YOUR COMPLAINT WAS HANDLED

Screening decision: There is no statutory right of appeal from a screening decision of the Director. If you disagree with a screening decision, the only way to review that decision is to bring an application for judicial review in the Ontario Superior Court of Justice.

Investigation referred to a police service: If you disagree with the way that your complaint about an officer's conduct was investigated by a police service, or the result of that investigation, you may request a review of the conduct investigation. A Request for Review should be made within 30 days from the date that you were notified of the results of the police investigation otherwise the OIPRD may not conduct the review.

Investigation conducted by the OIPRD:

There is no statutory right of appeal from the findings of the Director after an OIPRD investigation. If you disagree with the outcome of the investigation, the only way to review the Director's decision is to bring an application for judicial review in the Ontario Superior Court of Justice.

Result of a disciplinary hearing:

If you disagree with the outcome of a disciplinary hearing you may appeal the result to the OCPC.

Investigation of a policy/service complaint: If you disagree with the chief's decision about a policy or service complaint you may request a review by the police services board. There is no review process of the decision of the OPP Commissioner regarding a provincial OPP policy or service complaint.

All complaints must be submitted on the OIPRD complaint form. The form begins on the next page. Please read all the instructions carefully and fill in all sections of the complaint form. Make sure to include as much relevant detail in your complaint as possible and sign your name at the end.
